

Video News You Can Use in 2024

The Flying Focus Video Collective, a project of the 501(c)(3) educational organization Peace and Justice Works, has been producing shows since January, 1991. Over 1000 programs dealing with public policy issues have been cablecast and shown at public screenings.

We are activists using video as a tool for social change, voicing the voiceless.

A Former Guantanamo Guard Speaks Out

In a 2021 interview with Portland's Amnesty International chapter, former Guantanamo Guard Steve Wood talks about his friendship with a now-released prisoner and why the camp should be closed.

Norman Solomon: War, Activism and the Media

The author and activist spoke to Portland peace groups, focusing on the the history of the dehumanizing of those who are on the other end of US bombs.

Hiroshima / Nagasaki 2016 Toward a Nuclear-Free Future

The 2016 event featured Unit Souza taiko (drums) and Dr. Hideko Tamura Snider--a hibakusha (survivor of the 1945 blasts).

March for Justice System Reform and Equity in Education

An October 2020 rally at Columbia park with activists speaking out, plus interviews after a march to McCoy park addressing race, justice and education.

Portland's overpolicing of Black community members

In this short clip, a member of the Training Advisory Council asks the Portland Police Bureau to consider examining why such a high rate of Black people (20%+) are subjected to force in a city that is 6% Black.

The End of the World as We Know It

Conservation biologist Dr. Guy McPherson warns that abrupt climate change could bring disaster in the next decade, at a 2016 event in Portland.

*Animal Rights • Civil Rights • Economic Justice • Environmental Justice • Foreign Affairs
Health Care Alternatives • Multicultural Issues • Nuclear Issues • Organizing for Change Police Accountability • Systems of Government • War and Peace*

These videos and more streaming online at youtube.com/flyingfocusshows and youtube.com/flyingfocus